

About Social Science Honours at UWS

The B. Soc Science Honours program has been designed for students who are making outstanding academic progress in their degree studies. The focus of the year's study is research.

Honours provides you with the unique opportunity to undertake a research project that you have designed and which is supervised by an experienced academic in the School of Social Sciences.

The year consists of three parts – (1) a unit called Honours Pathways, held over three days during Orientation Week before the start of the Autumn semester and for two days during the winter break; (2) a unit called Researching the Social World, offered weekly during the Autumn semester at Bankstown (this is a series of weekly seminars that introduces you to ideas about and approaches to researching the social world) and (3) the research thesis, completed in early October.

It is also possible to do Honours part-time over two years.
