Michael Mangion : For bringing in his old school magazine (It gave me the idea for "Genesis").
Dr. P. Leverett : For his thumbs up to produce this magazine.

Students and staff (Nepean College of Advanced Education: Transfer Course) For your witty, brilliant, funny, and in most cases stupid quotes; which inspired me to put this magazine together.

This magazine has been compiled for the enjoyment of anyone who wishes to read it; especially those who either did or taught the transfer course.

John Dipalo
Editor
In the beginning there was nothing, a perpetual emptiness.

"What a boring place," said God. "I'll have to liven things up".
"Let there be light," he said, as some Solo pointed down his chin.

With a big flash*1 the heavenly body was created. The sun at the centre and the rest of the universe revolving around it*2.

A day had passed.

God was not fully impressed with his new creation, so he set about creating turmoil in one corner of the solar system. He chose a cold, dark, desolate, uninhabited location; situated somewhere in the milky way, this he called earth.

"Let the crust part and make way for Water."*3 With these words he set the lithospheric plates in motion. Upon doing so he upset the dynamic equilibrium in which the earth had been existing (since the previous day).

The second day had passed.

What God saw was good, but still empty.

"Let there be life," he bellowed in his thunderous voice*4. Thus the unicellular micro organisms were created, which would reproduce and populate the earth. (Evolution is such along and tedious process, and for simplicity we will say).

The third day had passed.

In his almighty wisdom, God knew that if things were left as they were (unchanged), he would again get bored; with that he created mother nature.

God bestowed upon her the job of continually redecorating earth, so that when glanced at it from time to time*5 it would not look the same old dreary place.

The fourth day had passed.

During the ensuing two days, the B.L.F. and the A.I.U. had a demarcation dispute, which halted all production*6.

The fifth and sixth days had passed.

On the seventh day God created Peter and Kris*7. To Peter he gave the power of knowledge, so that he may explain to his future generations the complexities of their environment. While in a jovial mood God created Kris, so that future generations of Peters*8 could have an inferior, intelligent enough to claim to be an equal.

After such a simple task of creating Peter and Kris, God had plenty of time to rest.

The Beginning Of The END.
*0. A true account; taken from the annals of history.

*1. Some corners of the scientific community are still split over this issue. The fact that it may well have been a big bang has only been theorised, but not as yet proven.

*2. After great deliberation the Catholic Church excommunicated Galileo Galilei. Who while trying to make a meagre living as an astronomer/inventor, stated that it was the earth that revolved around the sun and not vice versa. This was inconceivable to the Catholic Church who stood by the belief that God created the earth first, then the rest of the universe.

*3. In a latter stage of history, Moses tried to do the same thing but only succeeded in parting the water, and killing a whole stack of innocent Egyptians who tried to follow them to the Promised Land.

*4. At this point in time he could speak as loud as he wanted too, because there weren't any anti-noise pollution laws around.

*5. Since time has no meaning to God this may take anything between 0.000 000 000 000 000 001 seconds (time for a recoil of an atomic nucleus) to 5,700 years (half life of carbon).

*6. God contracted the B.L.F. to affix a massive artwork (which he had obtained from a Bohemian artdealer somewhere in the andromeda Nebula) to the centre of Terra Australis.

The A.I.U. believing the work to be theirs placed a black ban on any B.L.F. dealings, thus creating havoc for two days; by which time God had sidestepped both the B.L.F. and the A.I.U., and had the artwork dumped in place by the delivery van.

The work of art remained nameless for eons, until the nineteenth century when an unimaginative explorer named it after himself calling it Ayres Rock.

*7. See Science Profile #1 and #2.

*8 With the power of knowledge, Peter was able to invent new and imaginative names for his offspings (like Mark and Wendy).

TYPICAL EFFECT OF ALCOHOL ON BEDROOM BEHAVIOUR

One Ounce of Alcohol. Little effect. Head still clear, breath not bad, Pulse, breathing and liver normal. Can still satisfy partner.

Two to Three Ounces. Still pretty much know what your there for but somehow it doesn't matter. You're growing relaxed, almost tranquil. You don't complain when partner tries to sell you a raffle ticket. Sense of humor still crisp (fashioning a monocle by holding a biscuit to your eye strikes you as unbearably funny).

Four Ounces. Minor problem differentiating between bed and floor. Hope partner doesn't notice. Growing feeling of queasiness vanishes when you have a snag. Changing position brings it back, however, and you suddenly become sick. Partner is gracious and pretends not to notice. Curious urge to boil the bed.

Five to Six Ounces Still in control, but ability to perform simple sexual tasks such as drooling and moaning impeded by blinding headache. One of you had an orgasm but you can't remember who. Vision and tactile sensitivity slightly distorted. Cannot locate partner except by listening for voice.

Eight to Nine Ounces Tongue feels like luncheon meat. Though functionally dead, you find the concept of playing a wind instrument by holding it up to a fan profoundly fascinating. Unaware that partner has left, you begin a heated argument with the pillow over who should go for drinks.

From New Perspectives on the relationship between alcohol and silly behaviour. Dr. S. Hancock. PHd. Dip.PISSed (Carlton Brewery).
